

Will Poland capitalize on the AI revolution?

Tomasz Czechowicz on the biggest opportunity for Polish business

22.07.2026

Why, despite its strong economic prospects, does Poland still produce too few homegrown global champions? Are we becoming a country of managers of foreign-owned businesses rather than owners of world-class companies? And how will artificial intelligence reshape the investment landscape in the years ahead?

These questions are answered by Tomasz Czechowicz, Founder and Managing Partner of MCI Capital – one of the largest private equity firms in Central and Eastern Europe and a pioneer of the Polish venture capital market.

In conversation with Paweł Zielewski and Michał Piękoś on the ZNAM TEN BIZNES podcast, Czechowicz explains why international investors are increasingly optimistic about Poland, what barriers continue to constrain the growth of Polish businesses, and what needs to change for more Polish companies to become global leaders.
